National Railroad Wage Board Abrogates National Agreement And Lays Down Sixteen Fundamental Rules To Govern All Problems

CHICAGO, April 15.—National agreements defining working conditions for employes on all American railroads formerly under the Federal Railroad Administration, were yesterday ordered abrogated, effective July 1, 1921, by the United States Railroad Labor Board.

The board called upon the officers and system organizations of employes of each railroad to select representatives "to confer and to decide" as much as the rules controversy as possible.

"Such conferences shall begin at the earliest possible date," the decision said.

While the decision did not specifically say so, members of the board said all disputes as to rules and working conditions automatically were referred back to individual conferences between each individual road and its employes. The method of procedure had been sought by the railroads, whereas the labor side had favored a national conference between representatives of all roads and all unions.

The decision affected all railroad employes except those in train service, who are under separate agreements between the individual railroads and the four big brotherhoods.

Rules Laid Down for Negotiation.

In connection with the conference negotiations, the board laid down a set of sixteen principles to serve as a foundation for any rules which may be agreed to in conference. The present general hearing before the Labor Board, which has been in progress since January 19, will continue until both sides have completed their testimony, following which the board "will promulgate such rules as it determines just and reasonable as soon after July 1, 1921, as is reasonably possible and will make them effective as of July 1, 1921."

The sixteen principles outlined by the board were drawn up by Henry T. Hunt, of the Public Group, and upheld the right of the employes to organize for lawful purposes, the right to negotiate through representatives of their own choosing, the right of seniority and the principle of the eight-hour day.

It was specified that "eight hours' work must be given for eight hours' pay." Espionage should not be practiced by either side, the decision said, and employes' representatives should have the right to make an agreement applying to all employes in the craft or class of the representatives.

Way Opened to Speedy Settlement.

The board's decision came unexpectedly in the middle of the hearing on the justness and reasonableness of the existing rules and opened a way to speedy conclusion of the whole controversy.

The fight over national agreements was begun immediately after the return of the railroads to private ownership March 1, 1920, but

THE WAR IS OVER

The war about the war pictures has been amicably settled between Manager Driggs and the American Legion. This morning the Legion ordered a full page reproduction of a letter they issued last evening on the matter of the war pictures, but when Manager Driggs made the statement which is printed on page two, they cancelled their order for space.

The official United States War Pictures, under the auspices of the American Legion, will be shown at the Liberty Theatre on April 25th and 26th.

Consideration of rules was postponed by the Labor Board when it was formed on April 15, 1910, because of the urgency of the wage question at that time.

When the board began to function it divided the whole railroad controversy into a question of wages and working conditions. The earnings on wages resulted in decision No. 2, the $600,000,000 wage award of July 20, 1920, and the rules dispute was deferred until January of this year. In decision No. Two the board directed the national shop crafts agreement should be continued and the bulletins and orders of the United States Railroad Administration have also been continued in force.

In setting July 1 as the date for terminating the national agreements, however, the board declared in its decision yesterday that it "reserves the right to terminate its direction of decision No. Two at an earlier date than July 1, with regard to any class of employes, if it shall have reason to believe that such class of employes is unduly delaying the progress of the negotiations" to be entered into by the conference of managements and employes. It also reserves the right to stay the termination of the agreements if it believes any carrier is unduly delaying negotiations.

Asks Data on Decisions.
The board directed that the conferences "keep the board informed of final agreements and disagreements to the end that the board may know prior to July 1, 1921, what portion of the dispute has been decided." While placing the chief responsibility for drawing up a new set of working rules on the parties involved, the board did not say what part of the rules agreed upon in conference and the rules promulgated by the board itself would play, respectively, in forming a new national code.

Under the Transportation Act, provision is made for agreements between the roads and the employes and any such agreements, it was said, probably would form the backbone of a new set of rules. Such other rules as the board considered just and reasonable would then be added, it was said.

16 Principles Laid Down To Guide In Settlement of Differences

Chicago, April 14.

The sixteen principles as outlined by the Railroad Labor Board, in abrogating the national agreement, are as follows:

First. An obligation rests upon management, upon each organization of employes and upon each employe to render honest, efficient and economical service.

Second. The spirit of co-operation between management and employes being essential to efficient operation, both parties will so conduct themselves as to promote this spirit.

Third. Management having the responsibility for safe, efficient and economical operation, the rules will not be subversive of necessary discipline.

Fourth. The right of railway employes to organize for lawful objects shall not be denied, interfered with or obstructed.

Fifth. The right of such lawful organization to act toward lawful objects through representatives of its own choice, whether employes of a particular carrier or otherwise, shall be agreed to by management.

Sixth. No discrimination shall be practiced by management as between members and non-members of organizations or as between members of different organizations nor shall members of organizations discriminate against non-members or use other methods than lawful persuasion to secure their membership. Espionage by carriers on the legitimate activities of labor organization or by labor organizations on the legitimate activities of carriers should not be practiced.

Employees to Have Voice on Wages

Seventh. The right of employes to be consulted prior to a decision of management adversely affecting their wages or working conditions shall be agreed to by management. This right of participation shall be deemed adequately complied with if, and when, the representatives of a majority of the employes of the several classes directly affected shall have conferred with the management.

Eighth. No employe should be disciplined without a fair hearing by a designated officer of the carrier. Suspension in proper cases pending a hearing, which shall be prompt, shall not be deemed a violation of this principle. At a reasonable time, prior to the hearing, he is entitled to be apprised of the precise charge against him. He shall have a reasonable opportunity to secure the presence of necessary witnesses and shall have the right to be there represented by counsel of his choosing. If the judgment shall be in his favor he shall be compensated for the wage loss, if any, suffered by him.

Ninth. Proper classification of employes and a reasonable definition of the work to be done by each class for which just and reasonable wages are to be paid is necessary, but shall not unduly impose uneconomical conditions upon the carriers.

Tenth. Regularity of hours or days during which the employe is to serve or hold himself in readiness to serve is desirable.

Eleventh. The principle of seniority, long applied to the railroad service, is sound and should be adhered to. It should be so applied as not to cause undue impairment of the service.

Eight Hours Work for Eight Hours Pay

Twelfth. The board approves the principles of the eight-hour day, but believes it should be limited to work requiring virtually continuous application during eight hours. For eight hours pay eight hours work should be performed by all railroad employes, except engine and train service employes, regulated by the Adamson act, who are paid generally on a mileage basis as well as an hourly basis.

Thirteenth. The health and safety of employes should be reasonably protected.

Fourteenth. The carriers and the several crafts and classes of railroad employes have a substantial interest in the competency of apprentices or persons under training. Opportunity to learn any craft or occupation shall not be unduly restricted.

Fifteenth. The majority of any craft or class of employes shall have the right to determine what organization shall represent members of such craft or class. Such organization shall have the right to make an agreement, which shall apply to all employes in such craft or class. No such agreement shall infringe, however, upon the right of employes not members of the organization representing the majority to present grievances either in person or by representatives of their own choice.

Sixteenth. Employes called or required to report for work, and reporting but not used, should be paid reasonable compensation therefor.

SUMMER CAMP IS IN PROSPECT FOR THE BOY SCOUTS

Two Prominent Members of Rotary Club Offer To Raise Funds After Club Hears of Need.

TRAFFIC LAW DISCUSSED

Last night's meeting of the Rotary Club was largely devoted to the discussion of matters pertaining to civic affairs, and as a result of this round table discussion, the Boy Scout Movement is to be given added impetus and a committee is to call on Borough Council with a view to having the present traffic ordinance made more generally satisfactory.

The boys' committee of the Rotary Club recommended that no other thing was needed so much at this time for the boys as much as a permanent summer camp, where the boys could stay while learning woodcraft and scouting. It developed that a delightful site is available and that lumber for the camp is available at a great deal less than the market price. It was also found that already some sixty men have obligated themselves to the payment of a five dollar contribution to scout work and the committee feels that, with the boys doing the work, a camp can be erected for a sum total of about eight hundred dollars. It was found that it would not be a proper function for the club to undertake the raising of the money, but there was so much enthusiasm within the club over the project that two members volunteered to undertake the raising of the money, and so each will start in at once on the job. In fact they are going to run a race to see who can raise his amount first. These members are Howard Stewart and Philip Reed, so choose your favorite, men of Clearfield and send one of these gentlemen your check for anything from $5.00 up, according to your interest in the boys.

Considerable discussion was had about the anti-parking enforcement and a committee was appointed to give this matter consideration and go to Council with a complaint. Those in a position to know say that large numbers of tourists are not stopping in Clearfield because all the way through town they are met with signs "no parking in this square," and rather than run three or four blocks around hunting for an alley or a side street, they pass us up and go elsewhere to buy their dinners, cigars, auto supplies and other needs.

The club had as its guests last evening, Mr. Frank E. McCormick, of Corning, N. Y., William A. Hamler, of the New York Central, and three other gentlemen who were in the New York Central party.

BILL FOR REPEAL OF VOLSTEAD ACT INTRODUCED IN CONGRESS THIS A. M.

By CLARENCE DUBOSE

Washington.—The battle to bring back beer and light wines will be fought to a finish in this Congress, it was declared by both wet and dry leaders today. The fight will come to a head in the house as soon as the tariff and the tax problems can be cleaned up.

The prohibitionists are making preparations for their fight. Their ranks were bomb shelled by a new member, Representative John Phillip Hill of Baltimore, who unexpectedly slipped in a bill to repeal the Volstead law.

Representative Volstead accepted Hill's challenge. He is chairman of the Judiciary Committee that will report or reject the bill. Incidentally the new Congressman will ruin his own business. He operates a drinking water plant at Baltimore. "I want the repeal of the Volstead law because it is an un-American and unprincipled law," he said. Hill believes he will succeed for two reasons; first, if the bill passes, the people of each state will determine whether they want beer and light wine; second, the prohibitionists themselves never thought that prohibition would go as far as it has. Many of them are dissatisfied with the law. Hill who was for five years District Attorney stated that the wholesale violation of the Volstead law is leading to the undermining of respect for all laws throughout the United States.

OVER HALF MILLION NEGOTIABLE CHECKS STOLEN FROM MESSENGER

Chicago, April 15.—Four bandits held up two messengers from the Chicago Clearing House today and escaped with $638,000 in negotiable checks. Two messengers, Eugene Oldenwald, aged 18 and Edward Sundermacher, aged 18, left the clearing house at 9 a. m. to carry checks to out lying districts. They boarded the Illinois Central train to go first to the Woodlawn Trust Company. Four bandits boarded the train shortly after. When the train reached 20th Street the bandits held up the five passengers and messengers. They seized the satchels from the messengers' hands. The bandits ordered the conductor to stop the train. When the brakes were applied the bandits jumped from the train over a fence and into a taxi. A passenger who followed was compelled to give up the chase as one of the bandits emptied a revolver at him. An official of the clearing house said they could be cashed at any bank.

ARE VACATIONS SINFUL?

This is a peculiar time of year for Senator Smoot to come forth with the declaration that he has never taken a vacation. No wonder he is quoted as saying that his life is very uninteresting. He has never known the pleasure of looking over the brightly colored summer resort booklets and railroad folders. He knows nothing of sitting in a boat under the glare of a mid-summer sun and coming home with his face peeling loose and two small fish. There are a lot of mountains sprawling around in the home State of Utah, but probably if he climbed one of them the Senator would call it work and deny that he was just out for the fun.

The witness further confesses that he never attends baseball games nor plays golf, that he works sixteen hours a day and would rather raise the tariff than attend a theatre. His only recreation is sleeping seven hours each night.

It takes all kinds of men to make a world, and no doubt there are men for more such as this Senator; given half a population of his kind, the other half could rest and play without labor, and still the world's work would be done. It is a mistake to let away one's time, Senator Smoot declares, but the general verdict of his fellows will be that it is an equally great mistake to be so bound up in the business of banking, wool man, politician and politician as to find no time for joy in what the world calls "living by the way as we journey through life."—Gladia Bee

One Hundredth Birthday of Order in State of Pennsylvania To Be Gloriously Celebrated

MONSTER STREET PARADE

The city of Philadelphia will witness the greatest outpouring of Old Fellows ever known, on Tuesday, June 7th, 1921, when a large and picturesque parade will be held on Broad Street, Spring Garden Street and the Parkway, in honor of the 100th Anniversary of Old F. O. F. in Pennsylvania.

The celebration will start on Monday, June 6th, by the placing of a Bronze Tablet on the building that now occupies the site of the old F. O. F. Temple, No. 218 Arch Street, which was the birth place of the Order in 1821; the tablet will be under the direction of the Pennsylvania Lodge No. 1 and will be participated in by the members of the Grand Lodge and the various local lodges.

At 10 A. M. on Tuesday, June 7th, the members of the Order will assemble at the F. O. F. Temple, where a large number of the members of the Order will be present. A large number of the members of the Order will be present. A large number of the members of the Order will be present.

On Tuesday afternoon, June 7th, about 40,000 members of Cantons, Encampments, Rebekah and Subordinate Lodges, together with the children from the several Orphan Homes, and the residents of the Aged Homes, will participate in what is expected to be the largest parade of a Fraternal Order ever held.

In the evening, at the Second Regiment Armory, the Grand Declaration of Chivalry will be conferred on a number of prominent members of the Order by the General Commanding, Patriarchs Militant and Grand Military Ball will follow this event.

Wednesday evening, June 8th will be devoted to a Banquet and Dance in Scottish Rites Hall, and a special Degree work will be given in the Temple and other large halls.

Thursday afternoon and evening Willow Grove will be the scene of activities and general sports, and games will be arranged for the children of the Orphanages and the young element of the Order. Special trains and cars will be provided.

Atlantic City will be the Friday site and the grand finale of what promises to be a most delightful week, and judging by the extensive preparations being made by the lodges in every city, town and hamlet throughout this state, and from New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Delaware, Maryland and West Virginia, to be in Philadelphia that week, the Committee of Arrangements will have its hands full but owing to the extensive preparations made by that Committee every visitor will be comfortably housed and cared for.

"From this grim scene Ricardo raised his eyes to the palace, the castellated towers of which, looming through the tufted palms, were reflecting the setting sun. Over the balustrade of one of the upper balconies the limp body of a Sarros sharpshooter, picked off from the street, drooped grotesquely, his arms hanging downward as if in ironical welcome to the son of Ruey the Beloved. The sight induced in Ricardo a sense of profound sadness; his Irish imagination awoke; to him that mute figure seemed to call upon him for pity, for kindness, for forbearance, for understanding and sympathy. Those outlying arms of the martyred poor symbolized to Ricardo Ruey the spirit of liberty, shackled and helpless, calling upon him for deliverance; they brought to his alert mind a clearer realization of the duty that was his than he had ever had before. He had a great task to perform, a task inaugurated by his father, and which Ricardo could not hope to finish in his lifetime. He must solve the agrarian problem; he must develop the rich natural resources of his country; he must provide free, compulsory education and evolve from the ignorance of the poor an intelligence that would build up that which Sobrante, in common with her sister republics, so wickedly lacked—the great middle class that stands always as a buffer between the aggressive and selfishness of the upper class and the helplessness and childlike of the lower.

Ricardo bowed his head. "Help me O Lord," he prayed, "Thou hast given me in Thy wisdom a man's task. Help me that I may not prove unworthy."

Mother Jenks, grown impatient at the lack of news concerning Webster, left Dolores to her grief in the room across the hall and sought the open air, for of late she had been experiencing with increasing frequency a slight feeling of suffocation. She sat down on the broad granite steps, helped herself to a much-needed "bracer" from her brandy flask and was gazing pensively at the scene around her when Ricardo came upon the stairs.

"Hello!" Mother Jenks saluted him. "We've 'ave you been, Mr. Bowers?"

"I have just returned from capturing Sarros, Mrs. Jenks. He is on his way to the arsenal under guard."

"Gor! strike me pink!" the old lady cried. "Ave I lived to see this day?" Her face was wreathed in a happy smile. "I wonder how the beggar feels to 'ave the shoe on the other foot, eh—the 'careless' bound! 'Im 'upin' this general Ruey will 'ave the blighted shot."

"You need have no worry on that score, Mrs. Jenks. I'm General Ruey. Andrew Bowers was just my summer name, as it were."

"Angels guard me! Wat the bloom on 'ell surprise won't we 'ave next? You branch of the Ruey tribe do you belong to? Are you a nephew of 'im that was president before Sarros shot 'im? Antonio Ruey, who was 'art brother to the president, 'ad a son 'n' called Ricardo. Are you 'im, might I ask?"

"I am the son of Ricardo the Beloved," he answered proudly.

"Not the lad us was away at school when 'is father was hexcuted?"

"I am that same lad, Mrs. Jenks. And who are you? You seem to know a deal of my family history."

"I," the old publican replied with equal pride, "am Mrs. Col. Emory Jenks, who was your father's chief of artillery an' 'ad the hextreme honor of dyin' in front of the same wall with 'im. By the w'y, 'ow's Mr. Webster?"

she added, suddenly remembering the subject closest to her heart just then.

"His wounds are trilling. He'll live, Mrs. Jenks."

"Well, that's better than gettin' poked in the eye with a sharp stick," the old dame decided philosophically.

"Do you remember my little sister, Mrs. Jenks?" Ricardo continued. "She was in the palace when Sarros attacked it; she perished there."

"I believe I 'ave got a slight recollection of the matter, sir," Mother Jenks answered cautiously. To herself she said: "I say, 'Emory, 'ere's a pretty go. 'E don't know the lamb is livin' in the next room! My word, was a riot when 'e moots 'er!"

"I will see you again, Mrs. Jenks. I must have a long talk with you," Ricardo told her, and passed on into the palace, where on Mother Jenks once more forcibly captured the Almighty to strike her pink, and the iron restraint of a long hard evening day began relaxed at last, the good son bowed her grey head in her arms, unconsciously moving her body from side to side the while and demanding of no one in particular a single neighborly reason why she should not and her arms and legs were stretched out to the point of exhaustion, and she fell asleep at a nod of a day to the morning.

In the morning Ricardo, with his hand on the hilt of the four-pointed to the room where Webster was having his wounds dressed, paused suddenly, his attention caught by the sound of a sob, long-drawn and inexpressibly pathetic. He listened and made up his mind that a woman in the room across the entrance hall was bewailing the death of a loved one who answered to the name of Caliph and John, darling. Further eavesdropping convinced him that Caliph, John, darling, and Mr. John Stuart Webster were one and the same person, and so he tilted his head on one side like a cock robin and considered.

"By Jingo, that's most interesting," he decided. "The wounded hero has a sweetheart or a wife—and an American, too. She must be a recent acquisition, because all the time we were together on the steamer coming down here he never spoke of either, despite the fact that we got friendly enough for such confidences. Something funny about this. I'd better sound the old boy before I start passing out words of comfort to that unhappy female."

He passed on into the room. John Stuart Webster had, by this time, been washed and bandaged, and one of the Sarros servants (for the ex-dictator's retinue still occupied the palace) had, at 15 Pacheco's command, prepared a guest chamber upstairs and furnished a night gown of ample proportions to cover Mr. Webster's bandaged but otherwise naked person. A stretcher had just arrived, and the wounded man was about to be carried upstairs. The late financial backer of the revolution was looking very pale and dispirited; for once in his life his aboriginal, hattering nature was subdued. His eyes were closed, and he did not open them when Ricardo entered.

"Well, I 'ave Sarros," the latter declared.

Webster paid not the slightest attention to this announcement. Ricardo bent over him. "Tack, old boy," he queried, "do you know a person of feminine persuasion who calls you Caliph?"

John Stuart Webster's eyes and mouth flew wide open. "What the devil!" he tried to roar. "You haven't been speaking to her, have you? If you have, I'll never forgive you, because you've spoiled my little surprise party."

"No, I haven't been sneaking to her, but she's in the next room crying fit to break her heart because she thinks you've been killed."

"You scoundrel! Aren't you human? Go tell her it's only a couple of punctures, not a blowout." He sighed. "Isn't it sweet of her to weep over an old hunk like me? He added softly. "Bless her tender heart!"

"Who is she?" Ricardo was very curious.

"That's none of your business. You wait and I'll tell you. She's the girl"

"I Am General Ruey."

I told you I was going to bring to dinner, and that's enough for you to know for the present. Vaya, you idiot, and bring her in here, so I can assure her my head is bloody but unbowled. Doctor, throw that rug over my shanks and make me look pretty. I'm going to receive company."

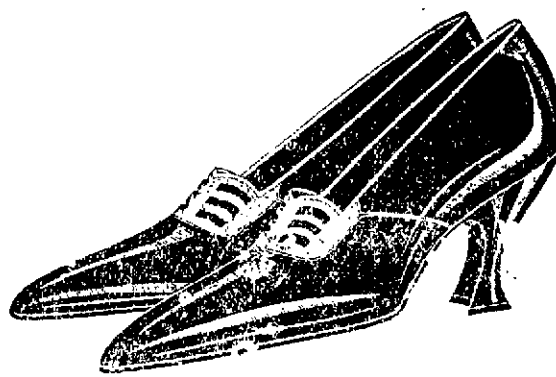

His glance, bent steadily on the door, had in it some of the alert, bright watchfulness frequently to be observed in the eyes of a terrier standing expectantly before a rat hole. The instant the door opened and Dolores' tear-stained face appeared, he called to her with the old-time camaraderie, for he had erased from his mind, for the nonce, the memory of the tragedy of poor Don Juan Cafetero and was concerned solely with the task of banishing the frowns from those brown eyes and bringing the joy of life back to that sweet face.

"Hello, Sarros," he called weakly. "Little Johnny's been fighting again, and the bad boys gave him an all-fired vallopuz!"

There was a swift rustle of skirts, and she was bending over him, her little palms clasping eagerly his pale, aching cheeks. "Oh, my dear, my dear!" she whispered, and then her color choked with the happy tears and she was sobbing on his wounded shoulder. Ricardo stooped to draw her away, but John Stuart bent upon him a look of such frightfulness that he drew back abashed. After all the past 24 hours had been quite exciting and Ricardo reflected that John's clamor was tired and frightened and probably hadn't eaten anything all day long, so there was ample excuse for her hysteria.

POOR INCUBATOR BAD INVESTMENT

Advisable to Buy Machine Used
With Best Success in Immediate Neighborhood.

DETERMINE SIZE BY NEEDS

Special Cellular or Incubator House
Should Be Provided if Equipment Is Extensive—Important to Keep Air Fresh.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

After the poultryman has made up his mind to buy an incubator, he is confronted with the question of makes and sizes. As a general rule, a cheap machine is a poor investment, requiring more attention than a good one and wearing out quicker besides being less dependable. The value of the machine is small compared with that of the eggs used during the normal life of an incubator. It is poor economy, therefore, to buy a machine which is not reliable. Whenever possible it is well to select the kind of incubator that has given satisfaction in your neighborhood, so that you may get the benefit of the experience of other operators near by.

Varies With Needs.

The best size of incubator to buy varies with numerous circumstances, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.
About as much time is required to care for a 60 as for a 300-egg machine; it is usually advisable to get one of at least 150-egg capacity. Special conditions, though, often exist which make smaller machines valuable.

A small machine is often used in connection with a larger one, all eggs being placed in the large machine after the first or second test. Many poultrymen believe that it pays to have an incubator large enough to hatch the bulk of their stock in two or three batches, so that much time is saved in tending to the incubators and brooders. In addition the chickens are more uniform in size than those hatched when the incubating period extends over a longer time.

A fair estimate for a poultry farm is an incubator of one-egg capacity per hen, provided that about one-half of the flock is to be renewed yearly and no outside hatching is carried on. The larger machines cost less in proportion to their capacity than the smaller ones.

Good Results in Cellars.

Incubators are operated in a great variety of places with success. Where only a few small machines are used they are usually located in a room or the cellar of the house. A special cellar or incubator house should be provided if the incubator equipment is extensive or if manna machines are above ground the walls should be double and the entire building well insulated.

Good results in hatching are secured in incubator cellars and in incubator rooms entirely above ground level, but the cellar is more commonly used. Incubators may be operated in buildings with single walls, especially in regions which have a mild climate, but a well-insulated room is preferable.

The incubator room or cellar should be large enough to allow the attendant to work around the machines conveniently. Many incubator cellars are provided with some system of ventilation in addition to the windows. This is not always necessary, however. The chief point is to keep the air in the room fresh. Muslin screens on the windows provide good ventilation without draft and at the same time keep the sun from shining on the machines.
Many incubator cellars have cement
floors, which are easier to dirt floors
to keep clean and neat.

HIGHEST PRICES FOR DUCKS

Market Usually Remains Unchanged
From July Until September—
Best Market in May.

Prices for green ducks (young market stock) usually remain unchanged from July to September. The best prices are realized about May. From then until July the prices gradually decline until they pick up for the holiday trade.

Many Beginners Make Mistake of Planting Everything in Catalogue—Pulverize Soil.

Some beginners in gardening become very enthusiastic in early spring when they look through seed catalogues. They have a desire to plant every kind of vegetable elaborately described and favorably illustrated.
As a rule not more than 15 or 20
kinds of vegetables should be planted in the average home garden, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Few beginners also realize the importance of well-prepared seed beds. Pulverize the soil as deeply as it is plowed. If the soil is coarse and lumpy, even though its surface is well broken up, the plants will not thrive. Large air spaces in the soil are injurious, but a great number of small ones are beneficial.

DYSPEPSIA IS GREATEST ENEMY OF MODERN MAN

Distressing Malady Is Most Prevalent of All Present-Day Diseases—Thousands Are Relieved by Tanlac.

Of all the conditions that afflict humanity, chronic dyspepsia, or what is more commonly known as indigestion, is probably the most prevalent. This most universal malady has baffled the medical profession for years and the most skilled specialists have been unable to cope with it successfully. It is a distressing condition, both physically and mentally, and it is the usual condition of the average dyspeptic.

Dyspepsia, or indigestion, as the case may be, is usually caused by the eating of too much or unwholesome food, and the mucous membrane of the stomach becomes irritated, and there is set up an acute or sub-acute gastric catarrhal condition, which prevents the proper digestion of the food. This food is apt to ferment and decompose, and as a result the familiar distressing symptoms of dyspepsia may arise. In mild cases there is nothing more than an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach, with a certain amount of depression, headache, loss of appetite, perhaps belching of gas and occasional vomiting. There may be also accompanying intestinal symptoms, such as constipation, pains in the back, etc. There may be only the familiar heartburn due to the inflammation of the stomach from excessive gases of fermentation or putrefaction. In the most severe cases—those that last over a day or two—the symptoms enumerated may be much more intense. The distress may be marked and the general constitutional symptoms more evident. When this stage is reached the loss of appetite, the mental depression and the general uncomfortable feeling in the stomach are much more pronounced. This is particularly true in acute cases. It frequently occurs from continued or in diet that the condition becomes chronic and the symptoms persist for an indefinite period. The appetite is very apt to be varied but it is never good. Heartburn is frequent if not constant. The stomach is painful on pressure, the tongue is coated, there is a bad taste in the mouth, and there are changes in the amount of urinary secretion. Constipation is also usually present. Although diarrhea may alternate. Most cases of dyspepsia can be cured if the diet is properly regulated and with the proper treatment. Promoting the proper amount of food and hygiene in the use of the most important features of the treatment. Most people eat too fast and eat too much.

One noted authority has said that the stomach is the fountain head of health or disease, as the case may be. Tanlac was designed primarily for the regulation of the stomach, liver and bowels, but it is no uncommon thing for persons who have used it to find that they have also been relieved of rheumatism and other ailments not generally recognized as having their origin in stomach trouble.

There is probably not a single portion of the body that is not benefited by the helpful action of Tanlac, which begins its work by stimulating the digestive organs thereby enriching the blood and invigorating the whole system. Next it enables the weak, worn-out stomach to thoroughly digest the food, permitting the assimilation of the nourishing elements.

Millions of people have not only been relieved of the most obstinate forms of dyspepsia and indigestion by the Tanlac treatment, but many of them have reported a remarkable and rapid increase in weight and return to normal health and strength by its use.

To Prevent Old Age Coming too Soon!

"Toxins (poisons) in the blood are thrown out by the kidneys. The kidneys act as filters for such poisons. If you wish to prevent old age coming too soon and increase your chances for a long life, you should drink plenty of pure water and take a little 'Anuric.'" says the famous Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y.

When suffering from backache, frequent or scanty urine, rheumatic pains here or there, or that constant tired, worn-out feeling, the simple way to overcome these disorders is merely to obtain a little "Anuric" from your nearest druggist and you will quickly notice the grand results. You will find it more potent than lithia.
